Narrative Report

1) List your goal(s) and objectives as it appears in your strategic and implementation plan. What and how did you revise the objectives due to COVID-19 and the US Census Bureau’s operational adjustments?

Goals

1. Increase awareness and knowledge about the Census through transparency and linguistically appropriate messages.

   This goal stayed much the same as we continued to translate items into different languages and shared with residents the importance of the Census. If anything, we shared more detailed information about how Census and COVID were tied to each other – resources, funding, emergency operations, etc.

2. Support and include, when necessary, the California Complete Count and U.S. Census Bureau.

   We continued our contact with the California Complete Count and U.S. Census Bureau however contact lessened quite a bit on our end because our staff were concentrating on COVID-19 and wildfire response and so communication bandwidth with the Census dropped off drastically. In our medium sized county, the staff who were working with the

Due Date: November 16, 2020
Census were also the same staff working on COVID and wildfires and no additional staff were added to support Census outreach.

3. Connect with HTC populations in the County, especially those who have been politically, economically or socially marginalized.

This stayed much the same as the populations that were considered hard to count were also those that were most vulnerable or least educated about COVID-19 impacts.

4. Deliver a comprehensive and focused message that utilizes a multi-pronged approach to reach as many age groups, demographics, and communities as possible.

For this goal, we had to adapt our strategy to have less in person tactics and more email, social media, phone and online tactics since COVID prevented us from interacting face to face with many residents in the first 3/4 of the year.

5. Build relationships with residents, agencies, communities, and county/city stakeholders.

The pre-work that the County did in the beginning, with cities, stakeholders, organizations and communities was instrumental in our response rate and continued Census work. The relationships we built continued through COVID and were even strengthened because we all had to adapt together and share the same messaging.

Objectives

1. Education: Inform the public about the process, importance, timeline, purpose, and confidentiality of the Census.

   This stayed the same, the biggest difference was sharing the extended timeline of the Census due to COVID but the rest, the reason and importance were shared early and often and so the County did not need to do too much additional work to push those objectives.

2. Motivation: Increase Census participation rates in Yolo County, including HTC populations, by building trust, addressing barriers and meeting people ‘where they are.’

   Again, this stayed the same except for extending the deadline.

3. Activation: Involve and coordinate outreach among community organizations, media channels, and local agencies and stakeholders.

   This also stayed the same as our partners and organizations before COVID were the ones that were most utilized for COVID response, such as our Food Bank, community foundations, and other resource/needs groups. They continued sharing the message about the Census as best they could through social distancing and the services/resources they provided to residents.

Overall

I believe that if the County did not perform the amount of pre-work that we did, that we would have needed to revise much more - including our objectives, strategies and tactics. However, because we built relationships, started sharing the message about the Census early, it allowed us to continue our momentum through COVID and the wildfire season.

2) Reflecting on your own operations and outreach strategies throughout the campaign, please provide a response with specific examples for the following questions. Please also indicate which timeframe you are referring to in your response (i.e., education, NRFU period).

Contracted partner’s operations
What worked well operationally?

These bullets mostly happened in the education period.

- Having representatives from each city, college, and major organization in the county on the local Complete Count Committee; communicating regularly through meetings, phone, email.
- Creating ‘phone tree’ lists of who knew who, what groups of influence they knew, etc.
- Creating a Google drive of documents, infographics, videos, etc. that everyone could share, upload and use.
- Creating our own in-house graphics and images that were relevant, local, and authentic.
- Starting early and creating relationships.
- Setting expectations for all partners; setting a flow for decision making

What hindered the operations?

These bullets were during education and NRFU.

- Having one point person at the County (Jenny) – she created graphics, was the main person making contact and relationships on behalf of the County, approving invoices, ordering supplies, working on proposals with vendors, etc. Then during COVID Jenny was extremely busy and had less time for Census work.
- Getting information or funding from the state in piecemeal sections, I.E. little by little)
Yolo County

Contracted partner’s outreach

What outreach tactics worked well?

These bullets mostly happened in the education period.

- Meeting with organizations one on one AND EARLY to educate and share Census information. After meeting with organizations and giving them their own space and time to learn, ask questions, and get funding, they were more likely to help and could then be a new ‘tentacle’ to the County’s ‘octopus’, working independently without much interference from the County. Yolo County met with more than 50 different organizations who in turn were able to share their information and knowledge with others and so forth.

- Doing presentations specifically in HTC communities; going directly to these communities to talk with community leaders who could support Census messaging.

- Always responding to emails and phone calls from residents and partners the same day.

- Geotargeting outreach, such as our Entravision and Univision ads geotargeting Latinos in Woodland, Knights Landing, etc. or our Slavic Chamber of Commerce campaign to geotarget Russians in West Sacramento.

- Designing our own ads/graphics that were specific, unique and relevant.

- Working with local grass roots organizations who knew their communities the best – sometimes it doesn’t do much for the government to come into a community that doesn’t trust the government or know what we do. In some ways, it would be counter-productive or more of a hindrance to have ‘government’ come in and easier to work with local organizations who are already trusted messengers in those communities.

- Providing outreach materials for partners and organization so that they would not need to ‘eat’ or cover the cost themselves.

What hindered the outreach?

- Having one person be the main outreach and relationship builder with organizations and vendors (Jenny).

- Getting funding from the state in piecemeal sections.

3) Describe challenges and changes occurring outside or within your organization / agency that had an impact on the outreach work. Describe how you responded to these changes to work toward achieving a complete count.

There weren’t any big changes within the organization. The largest challenge was external – the COVID-19 pandemic and the wildfires. These two emergency situations meant that there was less time and energy to focus on the Census. Many of the partners we were working with, including the County staff assigned to the Census, were front line workers in terms of handling the COVID-19 pandemic for their agency. In the beginning of COVID, there wasn’t much time to concentrate on the Census, especially as most residents were sheltering in place. After July, it was easier to work on and push Census information. There was a lot of communication with partners through email and zoom calls and strategic re-working in various outreach plans – more outreach online, by radio, by mail and by phone call since in-person was pretty much cancelled due to COVID. I do think the Census outreach suffered from COVID and our self response numbers would have been much higher.

One other external challenge was that when I talked with state community based organizations (CBOs) that were local to my region or were given funding for my region, they often told me that there was no more funding left to do outreach in Yolo County even though their funding was for the entire region and they had not reached out to Yolo County to initially see what our needs were. This was extremely frustrating as they were given funding to provide outreach in multiple counties, including Yolo County. I felt that these organizations were putting most of their efforts into the more popular and populous cities, like Sacramento. As a result, the County relied more on local connections and funding, versus the state CBOs.

4) For county and ACBO partners, what was the county (or region’s) 2010 response rate and what was the 2020 response rate? If the response rate met and exceeded the 2010 response rate, what contributed to that? If it did not meet the 2010 response rate, what were some of the challenges for that? For other partners, please note what data you used and how you used data for your strategies.

Yolo County’s 2010 self response rate was 71.5% and our 2020 self response rate was 74.2%. I strongly believe that our county was able to surpass our 2010 self response rate because of the preliminary work that the local Complete Count Committee (CCC) did. Staff presented to over 100 various groups in the County, including nonprofits, seniors, schools, and so many more. In addition, vendors and contracts were set up ahead of time which saved time.

By creating the relationships early, it was easier to sustain them through the early uproar from COVID and also to adapt or modify outreach plans as needed. Also, partners already knew what they needed to do and did not need to check in often and could get to work right away or adapt as needed. Additionally, the pre-work with residents led to an early start in self-response rates before and around the time COVID took off. Also, as residents were asked to shelter in place, the Census was something they could do at home.

5) Please describe the process and results of your partnership coordination and how it educated and motivated the hard-to-count populations to complete the Census questionnaire.

Our local partners and local CCC knew that the hard-to-count (HTC) populations were going to be the focus of many outreach efforts, especially those led by our local CBO, Yolo Community Foundation. The process first started by identifying the HTC populations and which partners had ties or weight in those communities. Then it was a matter of reaching out to these communities and providing education and funding to them – education on why the Census was important and why their population mattered and funding on how we could give them the tools and money needed to not only help us in our outreach but also push their own mission forward. From there, usually contracts were set up or they would send to the County what materials they needed. After that, the partners did their outreach and once COVID hit, they adapted their outreach tactics. The County stayed in contact with the partners to work through any issues or concerns and also see if they needed different or new materials.

6) Please provide a list of key partners and describe their contributions of how they made a difference in your outreach efforts.

Yolo Community Foundation – Provided funding to local nonprofits to help with HTC populations and provided invaluable assistance during COVID, including acting as lead while the County was busy with COVID response.

UC Davis – Provided free services and access to student platforms, was a key member of the local CCC and did multiple social media campaigns to help educate students on the Census.

City of Davis – Was a member of the local CCC and provided discounted services, such as placing Census flyers in utility bill inserts, and free marketing on their website and e-newsletters.

City of West Sacramento – Was a member of the local CCC and provided discounted services, such as placing Census flyers in multiple utility bills. They also placed road signs on key intersections of HTC communities and helped spread the word to Russian community leaders.

City of Woodland – Was a member of the local CCC and provided discounted services, such as placing Census flyers in multiple utility bills. They also provided us free Census advertising on the billboard they manage in Woodland off I-5 for 6 months.

City of Winters – Was a member of the local CCC and provided free services, such as placing Census information and flyers in their monthly e-newsletter.

Yolo Food Bank – Was a member of the local CCC and handed out more than 1,000 census flyers each month for 9 months to their many distribution sites in English, Russian and Spanish. Also provided access and free tabling at their distribution sites.

Yolo County Children’s Alliance – Was a member of the local CCC and allowed us to present during an all staff meeting and later became a key partner – sharing hundreds of flyers with families, tabling on behalf of the County on Census information, and posting information on their website free of charge.
RISE Inc. – Was a member of the local CCC and later became a vendor, sharing information with their residents, farm workers and ag community and even putting up signs on the road about the Census and hosting free food events to get the word out.

First 5 Yolo – Was a member of the local CCC and was always happy to help in any way, including order books and supplies with their own money to help partners in their outreach. They ordered more than 1,000 books and thousands of bookmarks to give out through the Library and childcare facilities.

Yolo County Farm Bureau – Provided free advertising for 9 straight months in their newsletter to farm owners and farm workers; provided key connections to the ag industry.

Yolo County Housing – Was a member of the local CCC and allowed us to present during an all staff meeting and later became a key partner – sharing hundreds of flyers with families and residents living in their housing facilities, putting up doorhangers and posters in multiple languages and provided us connections and contacts to other HTC populations.

Winters Hispanic Advisory Committee – Allowed County staff to present at their meeting and also provided connections to key local influencers and community members in the City of Winters. They helped put up posters and flyers all over their city and even did free food and census survey events.

Yolo Healthy Aging Alliance – Was a member of the local CCC and provided key connections to multiple groups all over the County, including the senior centers, senior care facilities, and immobile senior residents.

Yolobus - Yolobus started as a vendor that the County contracted with to have exterior ads about the Census as well as interior bulkhead posters from January – March 2020. However, once COVID hit, the vendor ended up allowing our ads to stay on their buses for another six months for free and even gave us additional buses to put the exterior ads on for almost a 90% discount. Yolobus did us and the Census a great service through their partnership and support.

7) Please describe how you provided accessible and in-language outreach activities, including how you ensured equal and meaningful access to limited English proficient individuals and people with disabilities?

We ensured that materials were translated into multiple languages ahead of time (English, Spanish, Russian and some Chinese). Materials included bookmarks, door hangers, posters, flyers, how to take the Census infographics, etc. We also ensured that outreach activities in certain communities we knew had multi-lingual residents were manned by multilingual staff, fluent in the local language. We also did advertising in multiple languages, including: geotargeted radio ads through Entravision to our Latino community, ads strategically placed in D’Primera Mano magazines, commercials and advertising on Univision platforms, informational segments and interviews on Russian radio stations, advertising in Russian magazines/newspapers, and more.

For those with disabilities, the County worked with Resources For Independent Living to help get information to those with disabilities about the Census. Also worked with the VA’s office in Yolo County to help notify veterans about the Census.

For the homeless, we put together multiple packs of supplies (including first aid, blankets, lights, food, and clothing) and Census information and flyers to give to the homeless clients. Staff working with the homeless also spoke to them about the Census and in some cases, helped them take the survey.

Please share a story(s) of how your work has made a difference to Census 2020 and the impact on the community. Please include images and quotes, so we are able to understand the narrative behind the numbers.

I’ve done many outreach events (before COVID) to educate and inform residents about the Census and its importance. One such event was on August 21, 2019 when I tabled at the Woodland Community College’s Student Welcome event. I was only there for an hour but I spoke with more than 50 students and handed out more than 100 items, including pins, census cards, water bottles and other items. Many of the students that I spoke with were Latino and they did not know what the Census was or that it was happening. Out of the 50 people, only 3 or 4 knew about the Census. Quite a few people were quite surprised after they learned that the Census funds so many local programs that directly impact them or their families, including their financial aid. A few were shocked at the federal money that was at stake and what their community could gain or lose from it. Later once the Census had started, I had received an email from a student who was at this event I attended and they told me that they took the Census for their family and it was because of the conversation we had that day at the college. I felt humbled by their comment but also rejuvenated that something I had done had gotten a resident to take the survey, when they might not have.
Yolo County

The photo below is from that event, which I attended with Tatyana Kravchuk who was working for the Census Bureau at the time.

Here is a photo from an event on 8/24/19 at a car show in the small town of Yolo.

This photo is from the Woodland Holiday Parade on 12/24/19 with some members of the local CCC. Our car was all about the Census!

9) Please add any suggestions for the 2030 Census efforts, including timelines.

- Start earlier. Funding was an issue during this Census, it was given too late (in my opinion) and in too many piecemeal sections that often hindered when I could order or have contracts done with vendors. Some processes take a long time at the local level, so to have the funding early and completely would help local jurisdictions a lot.

- Get all the partners (state CBOs) aligned early and have them meet all the leads for the counties. There were some state CBOs I have never met or I emailed them once with no contact back. CBOs should be required to meet and outreach to every county that is within their jurisdiction.

- Provide each county or CBO with the branding or marketing kit early. This process was done too late. This includes hiring the state’s marketing vendor (who wasn’t chosen until late 2019 when they should have been selected in 2018). The marketing, branding, and toolkits were done too late and I ended up designing my own graphics and logo. This creates confusion with the public on whether the Census efforts are separate, in concert and who’s doing what. The more we speak with one voice (and one look) the more consistent and comprehensive the outreach can be. This needs to be done early, including making and providing copies so every county or CBO can start their outreach early and already prepared. It would have been nice to have t-shirts, stickers, logos, flyers, etc. already done and in multiple languages.

10) Select the statewide marketing or communications vendor 3 years before 2030 Census. The vendor started too late and even did repetitive work that other organizations already did (like message mapping or community surveys). By the time they got going and actually sent out graphics, many counties had already designed their own.

Why We Participate: COMMUNITY

The Census is one way in which we can bring money to our community’s much needed programs and services.

Yolo County’s communities are all diverse and important.

The Census helps communities get funding they need. Census data impacts our lives everyday and can help:

- Residents support community initiatives
- Local governments plan new schools and hospitals
- Businesses build factories and stores that create new jobs
- Real estate developers and city planners map new homes and improve neighborhoods

Why We Participate: WE ALL COUNT

Our voices deserve to be heard and our communities deserve to have the funding they need.

We all matter. We all count.

Every person deserves the right to be counted.

If we don’t take the Census, the government won’t know we exist and will give money, that was supposed to go to our community, to other communities who did take the Census.

Let’s complete the Census together.

Who Gets Counted In The Census?

The Census counts every living person in the United States, including:

- Children
- Homeless
- College students
- People in care facilities
- Seniors
- Immigrants
- Prisoners
- And everyone else

Even if you are living here for a short time, you still get counted here when the Census survey comes. You will help track our growing population and be a placeholder for the next person that comes after you.

For example, if you are a student going to college, you are counted in the community where you currently live. When you leave, another student will take your place and the Census survey helps account for this cycle.
